When I was about 13-14, I used to dream of being in a band. Yes, think about it, what were a bunch of 13-14 year old kids doing dreaming about joining a band and becoming idols to everybody? Im sorry, thats the dream of every teenager, I know! But at that age, your imagination is rather limited and youre more interested in imagining worlds and heroes. So imagine my surprise when a guy rang up to sing me songs by Janis Ian, and - surprise surprise! - he was a vocalist! Some time later when I was studying at university, I saw Jeremy did a Janis Ian cover on stage at an open mic session and I instantly lept from my chair and whirled around to look at him. I lept and spun around again and again, and even in my weary, overworked state, I had to force myself to stop and watch for a little while. To listen and observe was a rare experience for me at that age, and Jeremy sang and played with so much feeling, I was awed. He seemed such a natural, like he was born to perform. Something that seems inconceivable to a younger listener now, but that event in 1995 sparked an interest for me that still takes my breath away to this day. Time passed, life went on and there were other things for my time and energy to focus on, and Jeremy moved on to a new adventure. But I kept thinking that day that if I ever had the chance, I would like to do a cover of The Magnetics brilliant Closer. Time did fly by, and a few years ago I was given the opportunity to realise that dream. But at that time I had no voice or time for rehearsal, so I called up my good friend Rob Stoddart, who is a talented vocalist and we decided to gather some fellow youngsters and do a bit of a jam. We rehearsed a couple of songs, including Closer and now its time to let you listen to the results.
